

Case study: Cell phones locker, Amdocs

amdocs

The Problem

Amdocs is the market-leader in software solutions and services for the world's largest communications, entertainment and media service providers, in more than 80 countries. The company top management does not allow cell phones usage in its corporate HQ main conference room, due to the sensitivity of the information discussed.

Amdocs used to ask its employees to deposit their cell phone in a wooden box before entering such sensitive discussion, leaving its top management's cell phones unsecured..

The Solution

We offered one wall mounted FRAME unit that was installed right before the conference room entrance.

The systems includes 35 cell phone compartments and is operated with Amdocs' current employees' tags or via biometric identification.

Only the employee has access to his/her cell phone.

The Result

- All management's cellphones are now completely secured without any need of carrying mechanical key or deposit slip
- No receptionist involvement
- Reduced corporate liability
- Fast check in and check out
- Simple operation
- All transactions are documented and captured by video
- Remote monitoring
- Impressive and elegant design
